

ELENA SOTERAKIS is a Brooklyn based visual artist exploring environmental degradation and the perils of climate change. In an era of environmental neglect, Soterakis' artwork challenges cultural and ethical norms while depicting 21st Century anthropogenic landscapes.

Soterakis has participated in exhibitions at Matsudo Science and Art Festival in Tokyo, Japan, SPRING/BREAK Art Fair, and SUPERCOLLIDER in Los Angeles, JONATHAN FERRERA GALLERY in New Orleans, The Center for Contemporary Political Art in Washington D.C., and Winter Street Gallery at Sawyer Yards in Houston. In addition, she has exhibited throughout New York at the Flowers Gallery, The NARS Foundation, The Islip Museum, The Long Island Museum, Sotheby's New York, and The NPR/WNYC Jerome L. Greene Space.
